How to accelerate and de-risk your innovations for sustainable business growth

How do you ensure your product innovations stick on shelf longer? With 1 out of 10 products that make it through to market success, innovation that sticks and delights the consumer is the key to sustainable growth. In a highly competitive market, innovation teams need to take a well-defined innovation challenge and find the right opportunity through actionable insights, picking the right ideas and iterating ideas and concepts quickly. Angeline will share how the Food Innovation Centre (a timeshare innovation start-up now in its 2nd phase) is helping businesses like yours to de-risk and accelerate their innovations to market in Australia and Asia.

Angeline's leadership in fast moving consumer goods & food service retail in commercialising innovation across Australia, New Zealand, Japan, China and Thailand markets has resulted in a successful track record of over 800 innovations launched across grocery and quick service restaurants. Angeline's career in the food industry has spanned from small business, consultancy to blue chip FMCG companies like Masterfoods Japan; Fonterra, Yum! Brands and Mondelez International and has delivered significant projects in innovation and change management initiatives over her career.
